Martin is professor of food and health policy at the Centre for Food Policy at City University London. He has published extensively on issues of food and public health policy.

He was a founder member of the London Food Board and was the public health representative on the London 2012 Olympic Food Advisory Board. He sat on the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) advisory boards on preventing CVD and is a member of two scientific committees 1) the Irish Government's safefood and 2) the International Obesity Taskforce. Current research involves collaborations with researchers in Australia, Portugal and the US. In 2012 and 2013 he was the 'Thinker in Residence' at Deakin University, Melbourne. Martin was the Australian Healthway's fellow for 2008 and again in 2016. More recent work has included research on the European Most Deprived Persons Programme; a review of food taxation schemes including sugar taxes; work on the concentration of fast food outlets in areas of deprivation; a critique of the English Responsibility Deal and a review of the Australian food plan.

Pam Warhurst

Pam Warhurst CBE is a community leader, activist and environment worker best known for founding Incredible Edible, in Todmorden, West Yorkshire. In 2009, Prince Charles visited the project in support. She has inspired folk across the globe to get growing and start seeing through the power of small actions and invest in their own ability to bring about positive change.

Pam is currently Chair of Incredible Edible and has led or occupied senior board positions in a number of bodies and has been the leader of a local authority, chair of a hospital trust, deputy chair of the Countryside Agency and chair of the Forestry Commission of Great Britain. Pam has also served on several regeneration bodies and social enterprises.

In 2005 she was made a Commander of the British Empire (CBE) for services to the environment. From local community groups to UN conferences, Pam continues to spread the Incredible Edible message and her TED talks have achieved more than a million downloads.
